Problem Statement & Our Approach

Low Attendance & Retention
Women face irregular attendance due to household duties, relocations, and lack of family support. Dropouts weaken continuity and reduce impact.

+

Donor Dependence
The centre incurs ~₹20,000/month OPEX but generates zero revenue, relying fully on donor funds. Skills learned don't convert into sustainable income streams.

+

Lack of Market Linkages
Products made (e.g., stitching output) lack branding, business models, and access to markets. This creates zero demand pull and no financial returns.

उपाय

How can UPAY's skill development centretransform from a donor-dependent setup to a self-sustaining, revenue-generating micro-enterprise for the women it trains?

How can UPAY streamline data collection and convert it into actionable insights through a simple, costeffective, and user-friendly system?

How can UPAY design a sustainable and community-driven waste management model that improves hygiene, awareness, and livelihood opportunities in underprivileged areas?

KEY CHALLENGES

Even when training is available, women's participation is limited by household duties, social norms, and family approval.

The centre lacks structured market linkages, branding, and data-driven monitoring systems.

OUR APPROACH

Industry Insights → Community Mapping → Skill + Business Training → Pilot Micro-Enterprises → Tech Integration → Partnerships & Branding → Scale & Replicate

Revenue Model Block

- Shop fee: ₹500/month.

ROADMAP

IMPACT

Assure income for workers + upskill women to provide livelihood in families

CHALLENGES

- Retention issues & monitoring at start
- Align shop renewal & worker retention cycles

KNITTING/CROCHET BRAND

Problem

- Traditional crochet/knitting in underserved communities is seen as a low-value household hobby, not a source of income.
- Women trained in skills (like stitching/crochet) at UPAY centres don't find real market linkages → dropout rates rise.
- Handicrafts often fail to compete with fast fashion & mass-produced toys → low sales, no sustainable livelihood.

Result: UPAY's women remain donor-dependent instead of financially independent.

SoulStitch

Made by Her, For Her

Handmade | Premium | Scalable

OUR Solution

Many women already know crochet from their homes. We want to honor this craft and help it travel beyond the four walls.

Each doll is handmade, unique, and carries the story of the woman who created it, making every purchase a connection, not just a product.

Why It Matters: This isn't just about sales. It's about women earning their own income (₹5,000–₹8,000/month), supporting their children's education, and being recognized for their talent.
